Small Attendance At The Annual Town Meeting

Reports Show Town Is In Satisfactory Condition

There was a small turn-out at the annual ratepayers' meeting held in Cliff Hall last Friday evening. This was due entirely to the weather and the hard going underfoot.

Mr. R. S. Hodge was chosen as chairman and after outlining the object of the meeting called on Mayor Cox and Mr. H. Sheehan, of the School Board, to review the workings of their departments for the year.

In his address Mayor Cox said the financial statements showed we had not been slipping any but instead had gained considerable ground during the past year. He said the town had been fortunate in the matter of relief and attributed this largely to the co-operation of the several industries which had absorbed a number of those who would otherwise have been among the unemployed. Reference was made to the necessary repairs made at the pump station which meant that the system was greatly improved and was a guarantee of a better service in future.

His worship stated that the several departments had kept well within the bounds of their estimates as a result of which the town's financial standing was very favorable. He thought it was time to approach the bond holders with a view of compromising both in principle and interest in the towns indebtedness.

Referring to the proposition made by Medicine Hat to supply electricity to the town, Mr. Cox said he could not be sure as to the matter and had left it for this meeting for the ratepayers to decide what they wanted. He also pointed out that by a change in the tax set, the Mayor and council were now entitled to pay for attending council meetings provided the burgesses agreed to a by-law to that effect. He also thanked the ratepayers for their co-operation and assistance in making a special effort to pay their taxes.

Mr. R. S. Hodge, as chairman of the School Board, reviewed the work at the school for the past year, showing conditions there in a very satisfactory condition. The attendance in the public school is 198 and 47 in the high school with the average attendance for each room of 30.2. Attendance at the high school at year was the highest for a number of years. Fire drills were held regularly monthly and on one occasion the school was cleared in 36 seconds and never taking more than 50 seconds. The school had distinguished itself at the festival last year winning four first and four second awards. The Senior boys' Shield and the Army and Navy Shield had also been won during the year and a successful field day was held. Pupils in all departments had made good showing in examinations and the attendance during the year was 96 per cent.

Mr. Sheehan pointed out that

To Take Vote on The Poultry Act

Voters May Get Ballots From Post Office

Whether or not the poultry industry of Alberta will come within the provisions of the Natural Products Marketing Act is to be determined by a vote of poultry producers.

Holding on the proposed Alberta Poultry Marketing Plan will be held during the week of February 17th. All producers owning flocks of 25 birds or more, including hens, turkeys, ducks and geese, are urged by the Alberta Marketing Board to register their opinions regarding this plan by applying at their nearest post office for the necessary forms.

These forms should be filled out in accordance with the directions given with same and mailed to the provincial revenue officer in the envelope supplied. The ballots must be mailed by producers not later than February 23 in order to be considered.

Poultry producers are also urged to avail a series of radio broadcasts to be shortly announced and given over the Alberta network regarding the purpose and details of the Alberta Poultry Marketing Plan, and to attend meetings now being arranged in all districts of Alberta in which the marketing plan will be fully explained, before making definite decisions regarding the making of their ballot.

Owing to the inclement weather and the ratepayers' meeting both Burns' nights arranged for Friday and Saturday are postponed. The Legitimacy will be held on Saturday evening of this week, commencing at 9 o'clock.

The Board had kept well within its estimates without interfering with the efficiency of the service.

Chairmen of the several committees on the council submitted their reports of expenditure. Although some were slightly over their estimates good reasons were given for same. On the whole expenditures were well within the estimates.

After a discussion on the subject of proposition on Medicine Hat, the meeting unanimously decided that the time was not opportune for such a venture.

The matter of pay for Mayor and councillors was also discussed after which a motion was carried leaving the matter in the hands of the council as to whether or not they would submit such a by-law to the burgesses.

Votes of thanks were tendered to the Mayor and councillors and the School Board, the secretary-treasurer of both town and School Board and the School teaching staff, for the satisfactory work done during the past year.

In closing the chairman remarked that the reports from the governing bodies were most encouraging; that Redcliff was weathering the depression very nicely and that there was cause for hope and optimism for the future.

This Week at Ottawa

Ottawa, January 29th 1935

The speech from the Throne promised many things that appealed to all members of the House. A motion was made that an address be presented to His Excellency thanking him for his speech. It is likely that all parties will agree to this address, usually a long debate takes place on it. Mr. King spoke first. He spoke of the success the Liberals had had in the by-elections, reviewed the record of his party regarding Old Age Pensions and other social legislation since he published his book on Industry and Humanity, eighteen years ago. He said he would not oppose any of these Reform measures and offered to do all he could to hurry proceedings and limit talk so that these bills dealing with Unemployment Insurance, pensions and etc. which Mr. Bennett had promised over the radio could pass the House and the Senate at once. He hoped there would be no delay on account of Constitutional difficulties.

Mr. Bennett replied at length. He explained that the program was not for vote getting but was the further unfolding of his plan. He pointed out that a reciprocity treaty was being arranged with the U.S.A. and indicated that the details would be made known in a very short time. The people of the West will hope to see the American duty removed on our cattle going to the States. He strongly defended the Empire Agreements stating that they had saved Canada. He also seemed to indicate that there would be a general election next year. All through, of course, no definite announcement was made.

Several other members spoke in favor of making changes in the money system, the tariff structure and etc. but there is no evidence so far at least of a spirit of good will and desire by all to get behind any sincere effort to reform the Capitalistic system.

On Thursday the debate on the address ended and health problems occupied the time of the members. There is a strong feeling that the very best medical care should be available for every person in Canada.

It was pointed out that the very rich and the very poor could now get this but that the great middle class did not wish to accept this as charity and could not pay the high fees charged. State medicine is certainly coming soon.

Sincerely
W. F. Genshaw.

Six cartons of good fat cattle were shipped from Calgary in United States last Monday. The price received averaged about $10.00 per hundred.

Social Credit Meeting Draws A Big Crowd

H. Wilmott, Calgary Was The Principal Speaker

A.O.F.F. hall was taxed to capacity to accommodate the turnout for the social credit meeting held there last evening. Mr. Wilmott, of Calgary, was the principal speaker. He claimed the reason the U.F.A. convention turned down social credit was because Mr. Aberhart was not popular personally with the delegates, and the animosity towards him was seen throughout the whole gathering. Another reason was that the U.F.A. claimed social credit was their baby and they did not want any one to take it away from them.

Explaining the difference between the Douglas System and the Aberhart plan the speaker said: Douglas was a technical man whose principals were national and unalterable while Aberhart was a man of great principles and was more humanitarian, who outlined his plans in a more understandable and workable way provincially.

Mr. Wilmott outlined the manner in which business was transacted under our present system, and claimed it was largely done on paper through the means of a bank pass book, a check book and a fountain pen. He claimed Social Credit could be worked much along the same lines with the advantage of cutting out the unfairness in the present system. The speaker stated all this could be done by social credit, without breaking either the Bank Act or the B.N.A. Act.

Lack of purchasing power, Mr. Wilmott claimed, was the cause of our trouble. Men were not paid enough wages to permit them to purchase the commodities they were making. Hence the overabundance of goods. Social credit, he claimed would remedy this by the state coming to the rescue and supplying the means in dividends to absorb the surplus. Machinery, he said made men their slaves while men should be their masters.

The speaker then explained the proposed workings of non-negotiable certificates and how the dividends were to be used for the purchase of food, clothing and shelter. He claimed prices would go up under social credit as the state would set a just price.

Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Wedderburn are expected to pass through here on Sunday night's train on their way to South Africa where they will reside in future. Mr. Wedderburn is one of the pioneers of this district.

First Hockey Game Played Here Sunday

New Club Tigers Win Out By 4-1 Score

The first hockey match of the season was played here last Sunday afternoon when the New Club Tigers, 1st year provincial champions, played a friendly game with the local lads. The visitors were too much for the locals and had them outclassed at every turn, winning by 4 goals to one. The home team showed lack of system but they also gave evidence of some good material which could be greatly improved by systematic practice and training. Another game is being arranged for the near future.

SOCIAL CREDIT

The Review is in receipt of a letter from Mr. A.A.H. Reilly who spoke here a week ago on Social Credit, claiming that we did not give his exact work when we said: "He claimed the main aim of social credit as distinguished from real credit was to put the purchasing power in the hands of the public instead of being controlled by the few." Mr. Reilly claims the quotation would have been better understood if we had used the words "the present system" instead of the word "real credit."

Mr. Reilly also claims the Review was wrong in stating that he said the provincial debt could be paid by putting an unearned increment tax on all proceeds coming into the province. He claimed he said: "social credit proposals, by the sale of some $150,000,000 in a provincial fund, to raise sufficient to liquidate the provincial debt."

Since we have misquoted our sources taken at the meeting in question we are unable to give a verbatim report of just what Mr. Reilly said at that occasion. However what we can say is that we had not the least intention of misrepresenting Mr. Reilly's statements or in any way belittling the issue.

The Review is firmly convinced that there are many local leaks and injustices in our present system and we are just as anxious as Mr. Reilly or any one else to get them remedied, but we are just as firmly convinced that these remedies must be brought about by sane and sane, well thought out plans.

It has not been decided yet whether or not the council will submit a by-law to the burgesses on the pay for councillors question.

Education In China

Has Made Rapid Progress In Last Twenty-Five Years

In the last 25 years the number of grade school children in China has increased from 2,780,000 to more than 11,607,000, and the number of high school students has in the same time increased from 52,100 to 405,000. This outburst of the spread of education in China since 1912 was given at Nanking by the chancellor of the National Central University, Dr. Lo Chia-lan. He stated that in 1913 only four universities were supported solely by the Chinese government, and that these received $750,000 in that year. This year there are 83 universities and 29 special colleges, and they have received from the government more than $24,000,000, of which $4,500,000 has been for new buildings.

The complete change from the ancient educational method when everything was learned by memory and the introduction of western teaching methods are credited as the most important reasons for the growth and spread of education in China.

The abandonment of the ancient classics and their stilted out-dated literary forms, and the adoption of the "classics" of the spoken languages set to writing as a means of recording facts is also an important reason for the spread of education in China.

The formation of boy scout and girl scout corps and the introduction of athletics into the various curricula have also been important factors, declared Dr. Lo.

Although the advances made during the 25 years in education are remarkable, Dr. Lo declared there is still much to be done in the educational field in China. "We are in need of reforms and improvement, and we need better equipment," he declared.

Advance In Surgery

First Operation On Brain Was Made Only Fifty Years Ago

Brain surgery is of comparatively recent origin, for it was only fifty years ago that the first operation was performed for the removal of a tumor from the brain. This took place at Maida Vale Hospital, in London, a hospital now known specifically for Nervous Diseases. It is in the overcoming of this disease that such wonderful progress has been made in the last century, and the Maida Vale institution has been a pioneer in this regard.

Following the first brain operation there was a flood of operations. The London Times, in December, 1881, published 1856, published only four letters on the subject, many of them expressing violent opposition, especially from opponents of vivisection. That opposition has now largely ceased. Now triumphs are constantly attending surgery of the brain, which has been the cause of the great triumphs of modern therapy.

It was Brown, and Hughlings Jackson who showed "that areas of the brain are related to areas of the body, and that consequently bodily symptoms can be used as guides to pathological conditions within the skull." The London Times, referring to the failure of brain surgery, pointed out that experimental proof was furnished by Ferrier and immediately made use of by Maccewen of Glasgow in his operating theatre. Maccewen earned the title of the first brain surgeon. His efforts were directed to the cure of degenerative diseases and aneurisms. It was Godlee who removed the first tumor at the Maida Vale Hospital. The history of that operation has been celebrated.—Victoria Column.

New Russian Stamps

Episodes of the Russian war and the love caused by war are to be shown on a new series of Russian stamps. They will depict war invalids, cities devastated by bombardments, burning towns and refugees.

In Role Of Peacemaker

Re-Kaiser Wilhelm Of Germany Was For World Peace

The ex-kaiser nourished an ambition to appear before posterity as the Napoleon of Peace, "British Documents on the Origins of the War," published recently by the government printing office indicate.

This trait in the character of Wilhelm II and his fanatical belief in his prophetic mission, before the outbreak of the Great War, were brought out by Lord Granville, veteran British diplomat, in a report to Lord Grey of Falindon, then foreign secretary.

In that year, on Feb. 18, Lord Granville had a long talk with the Kaiser following the baptism of one of the sons of Prince August Wilhelm, which he attended as representative of the British court.

Lord Granville quoted the Kaiser as saying "It is England's business to keep France quiet." Later he added "If Russia attacks Austria, of course we might fight."

The monarch told Lord Granville that for 25 years he had resolutely kept peace in spite of many provocations.

The Kaiser was convinced, the diplomat wrote, that he had been entrusted by heaven with a mission of maintaining the peace of Europe. But if anyone dared to break that peace he would "smash them—a very different kind of smashing from 1870."

Lord Granville reported: "The last sentence His Majesty uttered with tremendous emphasis, his eyes glowing and his fist thumping the table."

Use Different System

Every Country Has Own Method Of Handling Underpaid Letters

Not all countries handle underpaid letters in the same fashion. In Great Britain and most British colonies the letter is sent on and the recipient pays the penalty. In the United States the letter is usually sent to the sender who is given a chance to correct his fault.

Canada follows the British fashion. It is difficult to find a parallel for the indefinite postal cancellations with which their postage due stamps are blessed.

In Denmark things are a bit different. The postal officials affix postage which may be lacking and next day a red-capped postman drops a little note in the offender's letter box. The slips reads:

"We are assuming that did not wish the address to pay penalty postage, we affixed the necessary postage to the amount of We beg you to return the said amount to this form and hand it in to the post office at your earliest convenience."

No details are available on the efficiency of this system but it is reported highly successful.

Subdued Hunky Wolf

Boy Trapped Animal And Harassed It To His Death

While men of modern cities think to keep the wolf from the door, Isaac Simpson, 15-year-old native boy, who was captured by a wolf, but subdued the animal and harassed it in his dog team of huskies for a three-day trip home, said a radio despatch to the Edmonton Journal from Fort Chipewyan, in Alberta's far north.

"Who's afraid of the big, bad wolf? Not I," sings young Simpson. He said that the wolf gave no trouble when taken into the house for the night. His mother did not approve of having a wolf about the hearth and ordered the animal shot. Simpson, exulting with the belated news, is almost equally excited. He recounts how one day last summer he chased a mouse in the wolf's paw of the Peace river, 30 miles west of here, leaped to his back and cut its throat, his mouth falling dead as it struggled alone.

IS THIS A CONSPIRACY AGAINST POSTMEN?

It is hard to imagine one's mail arriving at the front door in a burst of fireworks, but Holland is still making experiments with the rocket for use in connection with transporting mail. The lower picture shows officials putting letters in a rocket at Katwijk aan Zee, near the Hague, while the top picture shows the mail rocket after being released. The mail carriers union had better consult their solicitor about this.

Object To Hag Memorial

Pacificist Not Pleased With Certain Details In Church Window

In Pacificist countries some objection has been raised to certain details in the window to the memory of Earl Haig, which has been placed in St. Andrew's Garrison church at Aldershot, England, and recently unveiled by the Duke of York. The window is the work of W. J. R. Cook of Edinburgh, and was subscribed for by officers and men of the Scottish regiments.

The subject of the window is the supreme sacrifice of British soldiers, as symbolized by the crucifixion of Christ. At the base of the cross is a group representing the country mourning her dead, but preparing to carry through the cause for which the men died. At the base of the window, surrounded by the names of the most famous battles, are the arms of Earl Haig. The Pfanders group is also represented.

On the left are depicted Royal Engineers repairing a bridge over a river, infantry preparing to charge the enemy lines, the war as fought in the air and tanks advancing over "no man's land." On the right the medical staff is represented by a base hospital. There is also the representation of a cavalry skirmish, the men who manned the troops in the Channel during the submarine peril, and a camouflaged gun action.

New Type Motorcycle

The power of a new motorcycle developed in Germany is transmitted to the rear wheel with a shaft drive, instead of by the conventional chain and sprocket. A gain in power, as well as increased smoothness in operation, is claimed for this method of power transmission.

FANCFUL FABLES

New Use For Potatoes

Research Organization Seeks Way To Alleviate Canada's Surplus

Canada last year produced about seven million bushels more potatoes than the normal market can absorb. The research organization at Ottawa is in a position to make some suggestions with regard to the solution of this problem. It points out that millions of pounds of surplus are imported annually to manufacture certain food products. Investigation has shown that Canadian potatoes might be utilized to obtain products that are now obtained from the imported corn.

If the hint thus given has practical value it will mean a great deal to Canadian farm interests that are now compelled to dispose of potatoes at forty cents a bag or less. At that price they do not cover the cost of production and they are of exceptionally good quality.

It is possible that diet reform has some bearing on the consumption of potatoes. Five years ago potatoes were an almost inevitable item on the Canadian menu three times a day. There is now a persistent belief that the standard diet is too concentrated, and consequently, potatoes have become an infrequent item in the dining table. Many people abstain entirely from eating potatoes. Because such prohibitions become general, they are bound to affect the industry. Such changes in consumption, however, are more or less spasmodic. In the course of a few years the use of potatoes may be related as popular components in diet schedules. In the meantime, however, it seems fortunate to have scientific organizations capable of expanding the uses of products that are important factors in our industries.—Farmers Canadian-Chief.

Japanese Self-Servicer

Wealthy Manufacturer Develops Better Fortune To Social Service

Japan's biggest bicycle manufacturer, K. Okazaki, has decided to devote his entire fortune to the cause of social service. His own son was the immediate cause of this decision. Deeply impressed by the words of Nichida Tsuno, a noted Buddhist social worker, young Mr. Okazaki left his home and spent three years in the service of others, travelling over the country and doing all sorts of humble tasks for the poor without thought of remuneration. During this period he was a hand about his shoulders proclaiming his belief that the social service project, as it is called, is the best way to solve the social problem. His family were deeply worried at first, but in the end the father was completely converted to the son's views. He the bicycle manufacturer has placed one million yen at the disposal of a committee, to be used for social service projects, as the first installment of the ten-million-yen fortune he proposes to devote to the cause. Not So Unreasonable

Jumping At Conclusions Not Possible With English Spelling

Conventional English spelling it is argued, leads children to distrust their ears. They learn that the same group of words may represent half a dozen different sounds. It is feared, they abandon all the processes of the reason in despair.

But really English spelling is not so much unreasonable, as based on common sense. Immediately apparent is the fact that the same group of words may represent half a dozen different sounds. It is feared, they abandon all the processes of the reason in despair.

And is not the searching for those reasons a good preparation for recognizing the arbitrary fact that things are not always what they seem? A sound course of English spelling, it might even be maintained, discourages a false jumping at conclusions and this surely is satisfactory enough.—Christian Science Monitor.

A smoker's clock made specially for those who indulge is being commercialized by the Victorians. The base of the clock is cut out of a cigar box, and the hands are made of cigars—a big one for the minute hand and a small one for the hour hand. Everybody Likes Horses

Have Appeal No Mechanical Contrivance Can Ever Equal

Deep down in most of us is a love for the horse that gives us this race of animals a higher place than that accorded most others. The love of a horse is there regardless of environment or of the opportunities we may have had to own, drive or care for one. This fact was born in us recently at a meeting of a group of school children on Children's Day at the Ottawa Winter Fair and again at the Horse show held in connection with the Royal Winter Fair at Ottawa, a group of young boys' club enthusiasts were showing their calves, one and of the breed with several thousand school children from the city and surrounding schools looking on. There was quite a little applause as the various prizes were awarded for the calves, but all at once a class of Hackney ponies came on the other end of the arena, ridden by a group of young boys and girls. Immediately a round of cheering began, and the cheering was so loud that it was well nigh deafening. We shrugged our shoulders and put it down to the fact that many of the riders were from local families of Ottawa society and probably known to many of the children, and yet they enjoyed the cheering and the applause of the children. A half hour later, however, the rafters again resounded with a wild burst of cheering and shouting back to the ringed arena that a class of seven magnificent black Percheron stallions had just been led into the arena. As these horses came from Montreal and their ownership could not have been traced to any of the families of the school children of the audience, we decided that it was the horses themselves that had brought forth this tumult of applause and praise. What it is made these children cheer? Most of them probably had never had close contact with a horse but to put one hitched to a passing bread wagon. A good many of the must have been several generations removed from any association with horses. They had been told that horses were fast and powerful and that they could carry a heavy load and that they were useful in many ways. They had seen horses in the movies and in the circus and they had heard of the great races and the great winners. P's and Q's

SOME authorities have it that the expression "Mind your P's and Q's" has its origin in the care which printers have to take when setting type, to distinguish between the very similar letters "p" and "q." Others say that "once upon a time" tavern-keepers, in making up their bills, used to indicate a Pint and a Quart, so that a customer, in paying, had to mind his P's and Q's. Take your choice of explanation!

Probably no commercial publication in the world minds its P's and Q's more carefully than the EATON Catalogue. Every statement, every illustration in this book is checked, re-checked, and checked again, by Advertising and Merchandising experts and by the EATON Research Bureau before it is finally printed. All this is in the interest of ACCURACY—to make sure that no mistake in interpretation or exaggeration regarding EATON Merchandise or EATON Prices finds its way into our pages. For, above all else, we are determined that NOTHING shall be permitted to detract from Canada's firmly established and well-proven conviction that "It's SAFE to buy at EATON'S."
